Buffer Zone Problem Solved Trapper, Father Of 5, Drowns In Darby

Darbyville Man Found In Creek

Death Comes On Thanksgiving

A Darbyville father of five, who left his home early Thanksgiving Day to run his trap line, was found dead nearby in Darby Creek early Friday.

He was Eli Adkins, 48, who moved into Darbyville with his family about 10 years ago.

The man's body was found in the creek by Lloyd Brigner, Darbyville store owner, who started a search when Adkins' wife reported her husband missing.

Mrs. Adkins said her husband left home at about 11 a. m. Thursday, telling her he was going trapping along Darby.

Brigner notified Pickaway County's sheriff office at 8:40 a. m. Friday that the man was missing and said he would make a search of the creek. He found Adkins' body at 9:10 a. m.

DEPUTY SHERIFF James Diltz said Brigner located Adkins' body about 10 feet from shore, with the foot of one of the man's hip boots floating on the surface because of the air trapped inside.

Mrs. Adkins told authorities her husband had been having trouble with his heart for about 12 years.

Pickaway County Coroner Lloyd Jones said the man apparently suffered a heart attack and fell into the water, where he drowned. A watch in the man's pocket had stopped running at 11:15.

Surviving the victim, in addition to his widow, are five children: James, 15; Mary, 12; Jane, 6; Verna, 5; and Charlotte, 2.

The body has been removed to the A. J. Hoff Funeral Home in Commercial Point, where arrangements are being completed.

Rain Expected To Change To Snow Here Soon

Warm and mild weather, which succeeded in removing most of Northern Ohio's snow, ended Friday with a sharp drop in temperatures throughout the state.

"The cooler air coming from the northwest caught the northwestern corner of the state this morning," the forecaster said Friday, "and the south and eastern parts of Ohio will turn colder by evening."

The change in temperatures is primarily due to a slow moving cold air front stemming from the Iowa area, he added, and will keep temperatures at a low level for several days.

Rain, which has been falling sporadically throughout the state, will change to snow flurries Friday night and scattered snow is likely Saturday.

Temperatures will be variable with highs ranging from 40 to 47 in the northwest portion and 50 to 55 in the southeast portion. Lows are expected to range from 25 to 35 degrees.

Following is the weather bureau's five-day forecast:

"Temperatures will average five to six degrees below normal. Colder Saturday and Sunday with little change thereafter. Snow flurries over the weekend with some rain or snow likely Monday and probably Wednesday. Total precipitation 1/2 to one inch."

Davy Jones Fails To Claim Diver

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 23 — A free lance deep sea diver had the Coast Guard and his own cool courage to thank today for escaping from Davy Jones' locker after being trapped nearly five hours beneath the hulk of a sunken ship.

William Woods, 43-year-old diver from Santa Barbara, was hauled back onto his 50-foot vessel, the "Salvager" last night after calmly directing his rescue by telephone from the ocean bottom off San Francisco's Golden Gate.

Then he offered to descend again immediately to the bottom 30 feet below and retrieve two jacks the Coast Guard had lowered for his rescue.

SLAPS AGAINST AMERICA BRING RETORTS

Ex-Czech Envoy Says Russia Near To Stirring Up 'A Hornets' Nest'

PARIS, Nov. 23 — Czechoslovakia's former United Nations delegate said today Russia charges that America is aiding subversive activities in Communist Europe will "boomerang" and stir "a hornets nest."

Jan Papanek, who denounced the Czech government shortly after the Communist coup in 1948 and was ousted from his post, said the Soviets, by complaining to the U.N. have laid themselves wide open.

He declared that thousands of persons outside the Iron Curtain are ready to testify to the brutality and devious methods of Russia's police state and those of the Soviet satellites.

He added: "If it comes to a General Assembly debate, Vishinsky (Soviet foreign minister) will find he stepped on a hornets' nest."

Papanek stressed that refugees from Communist tyranny are organizing themselves into a huge exile machine, which in unity of purpose and thought, parallels the North Atlantic Treaty Organization on the military side.

Non-Communist delegates believe, in general, that Vishinsky is throwing a "red herring" into the assembly to counteract the heavy and favorable impact made by the West's disarmament plan.

United States delegation spokesman said Ambassador Warren Austin will not oppose Vishinsky's demand that the complaint be added to the assembly agenda.

On the contrary, the spokesman said, Austin will vote for it.

He also said that this year's style in Soviet accusation is much milder than last year's when the Soviet charged the United States with aggression against Communist China.

The British, after a long meeting with U.S. representatives, reportedly agreed to go along with any decision the Americans may make on methods of dealing with the Soviet complaint.

French diplomatic sources regard the Russian move as "slightly ridiculous."

One Frenchman said:

"It is well known that the Soviets maintain the biggest intelligence and subversive machine abroad. The difference is that the U.S. publishes appropriations. The Soviets keep foreign activity budgets tightly secret."

A $100-million appropriation in the budget for the Mutual Security Agency provides for aid to refugees from Communist persecution when such aid is in keeping with the aims of the North Atlantic defense pact.

The appropriation provided the base for the Soviet charge that the U.S. is "financing traitors to their native lands, war criminals who fled their countries and are hiding in the United States... and for armed groups with the purpose of fighting against the Soviet Union."

The Russians say the act constitutes "aggression against the Soviet Union and states of the people's democracies."

U.S. Readies Sharp Note

Reds Condemn Yank 'Propaganda'

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23 — The State Department today was preparing a sharp note to Moscow charging the Soviets with a continuous program of propaganda and attempted subversion in the United States since 1933.

Informed sources said this would be the American answer to the Moscow-delivered protest Wednesday against provisions in the 1951 mutual security act designed to aid underground movements behind the Iron Curtain.

The State Department was also expected to formally reject the Russian charges of alleged violation of the 1933 agreement between the two nations as based on neither fact nor international law.

The Russian protest and the expected U.S. counter-protest are based on the agreement made at the time diplomatic relations were established between the two nations when each pledged to avoid propagandistic or subversive activities.

THE SOVIETS called the new mutual security law a plan to finance "subversive activities and sabotage" in Communist nations and called on Congress to repeal it.

Singled out was the $100 million appropriation in the act providing assistance for victims of Communist persecution and aid to underground movements.

The section was added in Congress and was not in the original draft of the multi-billion dollar aid measure as submitted by the administration. It was approved in both houses with little debate.

An indication of the State Department's attitude toward the Russian objection came in the prompt official answer, released in Washington within minutes after the text of the protest was announced in Moscow.

The statement called the Russian note "groundless" and declared it came "with singular ill grace" from a government which is "consistently trying to subvert the free world."

Observers noted that the United States can cite the conviction of eleven top Communist leaders in New York as evidence of a charge that the Soviets have practiced continued subversive activities in the U.S.

The history of the Communist International may also be used to support the American position.

It Couldn't Be 'Gambling'

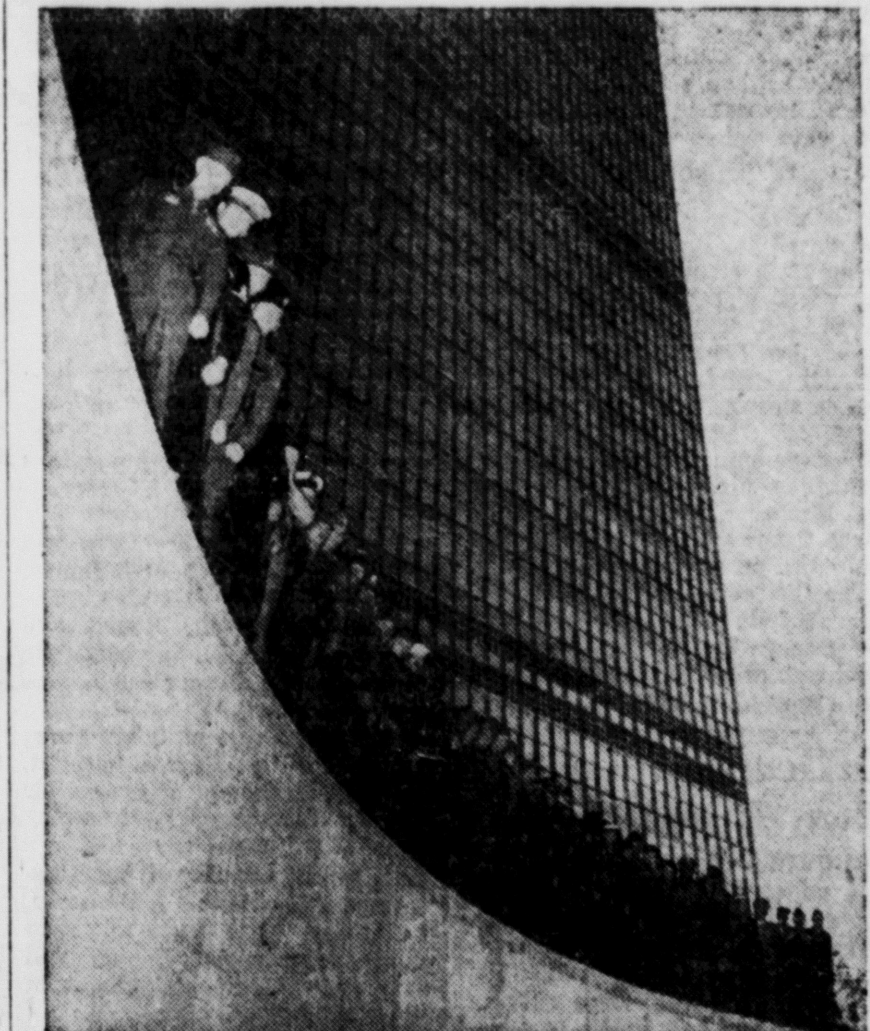

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23 — Sen. O'Connor (D-Md., today challenged Sen. Kefauver (D-Tenn.), to a "bet" on the Tennessee-Maryland Sugar Bowl football game.

O'Connor didn't call it a bet—that would be unseemly for two former members of the Senate Crime Committee. Instead, he proposed these "forfeits":

If Tennessee wins, O'Connor would "forfeit" to Kefauver "a barrel of the world's most succulent oysters"—from Chesapeake Bay, naturally. If Maryland wins, O'Connor proposed, "a Tennessee coonskin cap would make an acceptable forfeit."

Thugs Get $62,000

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 23 — Two bandits today robbed the Johnson County National Bank and Trust Co. in nearby Prairie Village and fled with an estimated $62,000.

FIFTY VETERANS of the United Nations forces in Korea representing 19 nations, are welcomed at UN headquarters in New York. Men from Australia, Belgium, Canada, Colombia, Ethiopia, France, Greece, India, Luxembourg, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Philippines, Republic of Korea, South Africa, Thailand, Turkey, United Kingdom and the USA, are in the line up above in front of the United Nations' 39-story secretariat building.

LIMITED ARMING APPROVED

West Germany Gets OK To Join Allied Nations

PARIS, Nov. 23—The "green light" was up today for West Germany's integration with the rest of Western Europe and for limited German rearmament, all under carefully controlled conditions.

The agreement, providing for almost complete equality for West Germany, was mapped out yesterday at a meeting of U. S. Secretary of State Dean Acheson, British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman and Chancellor Konrad Adenauer.

However, the agreement will come into effect only when the parliaments of six European nations ratify a treaty providing for a unified European army to which West Germany will contribute. The step is expected to take at least six months.

Among the provisions of the tentative agreement are:

1. The Western occupation powers will retain troops in Germany for the common defense.

2. WHILE THE occupation powers will give up the right to intervene in German domestic affairs—now contained in their occupation statute—they still will have the right to declare a state of emergency and intervene to maintain public order against both internal and external threats.

3. The present occupation statute will be abolished as well as the offices of the high commissioners.

4. All four nations will strive to unify Germany on the basis of free elections and conclude a lasting peace treaty which will also determine Germany's boundaries.

5. West Germany will contribute to the maintenance of Allied forces in Germany.

Adenauer expressed satisfaction with the outcome and declared West Germany's membership in the West European community eventually will lead to partnership in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

A spokesman said in response to questions that rigid new regulations have gone into effect to guard against future influence—peddling at the big purchasing center.

The cancellations involve forty contracts with six firms, only two of which have been named in known charges of irregularity.

Names of the other four firms are being withheld pending further investigation. The known cases are these:

1. L. A. Razeto, general manager of the Cincinnati Electronics Co., and L. M. Kratz, former Air Force field buyer now living in Eau Claire, Wis., have been indicted for giving and taking a "gratuity" of $900. The Cincinnati firm holds large government contracts.

2. Robert Hollifield, a government civil service employee in the base's air development laboratory, has resigned after being suspended for suspected improper dealings with Adam Cappel who resigned as vice president of the Cappel-MacDonald Co. of Dayton, manufacturer of Air Force survival kits.

New regulations, the spokesman said, prevent employees at the base from accepting even the smallest favors, such as meals or entertainment, from prospective suppliers of the Air Force.

Allies See Cease-Fire In Offing

Negotiators Make Progress Quickly

MUNSAN, Nov. 23 — Armistice negotiators reached complete agreement today on the buffer zone issue and an official spokesman said tonight the Allies hope to see an end to the Korean fighting by Christmas.

Lt. Col. Howard S. Levie told newsmen that Allied and Communist staff officers made so much progress in mapping the present battlefield that a provisional cease-fire line is expected to be completed Saturday.

Levie, spokesman for the United Nations command, said the officers covered the entire front during more than six hours of work over a large-scale map at Panmunjom Friday.

They found "only two or three" disagreements over actual locations of firing lines in certain sectors. These, Levie said, can be cleared up by overnight information from frontline units which already have been asked to report their present positions.

LEVIE REVEALED that the Allies and Reds had discussed the possibility of referring the remaining questions on the armistice conference agenda to subcommittees in order to speed the negotiations.

The UN command, he said, already has prepared a proposal concerning the next agenda item—the setting up of machinery to inspect and supervise the actual carrying out of the armistice.

The complicated buffer belt problem, which had tied up the truce talks for nearly four months, was finally solved Friday in 50 minutes of talk between UN and Red delegates.

Wording of the agreement on this vital issue was approved by both sides and thus the biggest barrier was hurdled on the road toward ending the devastating Korean war.

The solution provides for precisely what the United Nations command has insisted upon from the outset, namely a cease-fire line roughly the same as the current battlefield across the Peninsula.

Along that line the fighting will stop if a complete armistice pact is signed within 30 days. If the remaining negotiations drag out beyond that period, a new buffer zone will be drawn to conform with the war front as it exists at the time a full armistice is reached.

ONLY A FEW technicalities and a formality remained before the agreement on the buffer belt is sealed and the armistice delegates can pass on to other issues.

The technicalities have to do with joint determination by both sides of the exact location of the present battle contact line.

The formality is ratification by the full five-man UN and Red delegations of the agreement achieved by a joint subcommittee consisting of two delegates from each side.

MAPPING OF the contact line and subsequent ratification of the solution were expected within three days.

After that the full delegations are slated to resume plenary sessions in the Panmunjom conference tent. They will then tackle the remaining three items on the armistice agenda. These concern the creation of an armistice supervision board, the exchange of war prisoners and general recommendations on an ultimate peace settlement for Korea.

REWARD DUE in 'Heaven' NEW YORK, Nov. 23—A heavenly reward was offered today for the return of Air Force Chaplain Maj. Neil O'Connor's coat.

The Mitchell Air Force Air Base newspaper published this notice today from the chaplain:

"Will the person who came to chapel on Friday evening, Nov. 16, to meditate and pray and who got so deep in meditation that he took off with the chaplain's trench coat, please return the same? The reward will be great—in heaven."

Typhoon Kills 24 MANILA, Nov. 23—The death toll from a typhoon which hit the Philippines yesterday rose 24 after dispatches to Manila 16 fishermen were drowned Southern Luzon Island during storm.

His shipmates carried him back up to the blood bank.

The blood bank gave him back his pint of blood.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 23—Piero Taruffi of Italy, leader after five "legs" of the Pan-American stock car race, rested today in Durango, with 36 other competitors, survivors of a starting field of over a hundred.

Looking Ahead

By George Benson
President
Hardin College

The results of the municipal elections in New York and Philadelphia strengthen the feeling I've had all along that the rank and file of American citizens, whatever their creed or race or political party, have not lost respect for the high moral principles of honesty and honor exemplified by the Founding Fathers.

In both cities the people ignored party labels and voted for what they believed to be decency in public office. Entrenched corruption was defeated.

It should be a stunning warning to those politicians at all levels who have been participating in or conducting graft and corruption. Our nation has been deeply injured by the very fact that the dishonest and dishonorable acts of public officials have been permitted to go unchallenged by important leaders. The injury done to our younger generation will never be healed. But if, in elections from now on, a majority of Americans will assert their indignation over politico-government corruption as did the citizens of Philadelphia and New York on Nov. 4, the character of our nation will be strengthened and the morality of our forefathers carried forward.

THREE MONTHS ago Herbert Hoover made a speech at Des Moines on "Honor in Public Life." It was a significant and powerful speech because ex-President Hoover is widely acknowledged as an elder statesman and his integrity is so obviously non-partisan that a Democrat President of the United States appointed him to the chairmanship of a national committee to study bureaucratic waste and recommend economies in government.

In discussing the citizen's responsibility on the issue of public morality, Mr. Hoover said: "The practical thing we can do if we really want to make the world over again is to try out the word 'old' for a while. There are some old things that made this country. There is the old virtue of religious faith. There is the old virtue of incorruptible service and honor in public office."

"There are the old virtues of economy in government, of self-reliance, thrift and individual liberty. There are the old virtues of patriotism, real love of country and willingness to sacrifice for it."

"These 'old' ideas are very inexpensive. They even would help win hot and cold wars. I realize that such suggestions will raise that cuss word 'reactionary.' But some of these old things are slipping badly in American life. And if they slip too far, the lights will go out of America, even if we win these cold and hot wars. Think about it."

Congress, as a result of its own inquiries, is confronted with the fact that sacred honor cannot always be tested by legality or enforced by law. "In its frustration," said Mr. Hoover, "the Congress is groping for some sort of code of ethics, which with a prefix 'new' might protect the citizen from his own officials. Might I suggest that there are already some old tested codes of ethics? There are the Ten Commandments, the Sermon on the Mount, and the rules of the game which we learn at our mother's knee. Can a nation live if these are not the guides of public life? Think it over."

SOMETHING stronger than a new code of ethics is needed by America, Hoover contended. "The issue," he said, "is decency in public life against indecency. Our greatest danger is not from invasion by foreign armies. Our dangers are that we may commit suicide from within by complacency with evil . . . or by public tolerance of scandalous behavior . . . or by cynical acceptance of dishonor. These evils have defeated nations many times in human history. The redemption of mankind by America will depend upon our ability to cope with these evils right here at home."

"Here in this state (Iowa) where I was nurtured," he said, "I cannot but feel a strength that comes up from the deep roots in the very soil on which we stand." "That strength is in character and truth and decent living. And it will triumph. It will triumph. Because I know America is turning its face away from the maudlin leftisms and the spread of untruth of the past two decades. We sense the frauds on men's minds and morals. Moral indignation is on the march again."

Woman Blamed For Accident On Route 104

A 50-year-old Columbus woman attempting to turn a right hand turn on Route 104 about seven miles north of Circleville late Thursday.

Noah Damron, 39, of Kenova, W. Va., told Pickaway County sheriff's deputies he was traveling north on Route 104 at about 3:15 p. m. Thursday when the mishap happened.

Damron said he was traveling around a curve when the woman staggered out in front of his auto, indicating she wanted to hitch a ride.

The man told deputies that a truck was on the other side of the road, rounding the curve, and that he swerved his auto into the right guardrail to avoid hitting the woman.

The front end of Damron's auto was demolished in the crash, although neither he nor the woman hitchhiker was injured. She later was removed to Pickaway County jail on an accusation of intoxication.

Looking Ahead

By George Benson
President
Hardin College

The results of the municipal elections in New York and Philadelphia strengthen the feeling I've had all along that the rank and file of American citizens, whatever their creed or race or political party, have not lost respect for the high moral principles of honesty and honor exemplified by the Founding Fathers.

In both cities the people ignored party labels and voted for what they believed to be decency in public office. Entrenched corruption was defeated.

It should be a stunning warning to those politicians at all levels who have been participating in or conducting graft and corruption.

Our nation has been deeply injured by the very fact that the dishonest and dishonorable acts of public officials have been permitted to go unchallenged by important leaders. The injury done to our younger generation will never be healed. But if, in elections from now on, a majority of Americans will assert their indignation over politico-government corruption as did the citizens of Philadelphia and New York on Nov. 4, the character of our nation will be strengthened and the morality of our forefathers carried forward.

THREE MONTHS ago Herbert Hoover made a speech at Des Moines on "Honor in Public Life." It was a significant and powerful speech because ex-President Hoover is widely acknowledged as an elder statesman and his integrity is so obviously non-partisan that a Democrat President of the United States appointed him to the chairmanship of a national committee to study bureaucratic waste and recommend economies in government.

In discussing the citizen's responsibility on the issue of public morality, Mr. Hoover said: "The practical thing we can do if we really want to make the world over again is to try out the word 'old' for a while. There are some old things that made this country. There is the old virtue of religious faith. There is the old virtue of incorruptible service and honor in public office."

"There are the old virtues of economy in government, of self-reliance, thrift and individual liberty. There are the old virtues of patriotism, real love of country and willingness to sacrifice for it."

"These 'old' ideas are very inexpensive. They even would help win hot and cold wars. I realize that such suggestions will raise that cuss word 'reactionary.' But some of these old things are slipping badly in American life. And if they slip too far, the lights will go out of America, even if we win these cold and hot wars. Think about it."

Congress, as a result of its own inquiries, is confronted with the fact that sacred honor cannot always be tested by legality or enforced by law. "In its frustration," said Mr. Hoover, "the Congress is groping for some sort of code of ethics, which with a prefix 'new' might protect the citizen from his own officials. Might I suggest that there are already some old tested codes of ethics? There are the Ten Commandments, the Sermon on the Mount, and the rules of the game which we learn at our mother's knee. Can a nation live if there are not the guides of public life? Think it over."

SOMETHING stronger than a new code of ethics is needed by America, Hoover contended. "The issue," he said, "is decency in public life against indecency. Our greatest danger is not from invasion by foreign armies. Our dangers are that we may commit suicide from within by complacency with evil . . . or by public tolerance of scandalous behavior . . . or by cynical acceptance of dishonesty. These evils have defeated nations many times in human history. The redemption of mankind by America will depend upon our ability to cope with these evils right here at home."

Where I in this state (Iowa) "here I was nurtured," he said, "I cannot but feel a strength that comes up from the deep roots in the very soil on which we stand."

"That strength is in character and truth and decent living. And it will triumph. It will triumph. Because I know America is turning its face away from the maudlin leftisms and the spread of untruth of the past two decades. We sense the frauds on men's minds and morals. Moral indignation is on the march again."

Political corruption is widespread. The uprising of voters in New York and Philadelphia must be considered only a beginning.

The road to disarmament has been opened at the UN in Paris, but a Russian-enforced detour leads to Rome — and increased Western efforts toward rearmament.

The main negotiations are outside the UN assembly halls in Paris and they involve all the complexities of trying to rearm Western Europe quickly.

President Truman has said there is nothing inconsistent in offering a disarmament plan to all the world and simultaneously rearming the West. His reasoning and that of other Western leaders is this:

Russia will not accept a rigid disarmament plan under international inspection: until Moscow does, the West must rebuild its military muscle to withstand possible sudden Communist aggression.

The West presents a solid front toward Russia, but this is mainly one of determination. There are many Allied differences. Russia is aware of them as are the Allied people themselves.

First, West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer has arrived in Paris in the long-delayed effort to negotiate a settlement with the West to an extent that he can swing German participation in Western defense.

FRENCH OFFICIALS are suspicious of Adenauer, or at least West Germany. This has been

'Turkeyburgers' Are Suggested By Market Experts

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23—Turkey growers may be able to spread their marketing season throughout the year with the introduction of grilled turkey steaks on restaurant menus.

Arkansas university meat specialists developed the new dish, and report good results in recent tests. The steak was easy to make. First they removed all the meat from the bird and put it through a grinder. A small amount of skin and a bit of fat was included to increase the flavor.

After the meat was ground it was made into Salisbury-type steaks—"turkeyburgers."

Public acceptance of the dish is reported to be beyond original anticipation, and may help spark the way to a year-round demand.

The researchers say the meat may be ground in advance, quick-frozen and kept in a locker until needed.

The wings are ideal for barbecuing, and the giblets are used in the same way that chicken giblets are.

The researchers found that it was not as difficult to bone the turkey carcass as expected, and experience demonstrates that the return from the boned steaks more than pays for the cost involved.

A-Power Ships Due In 5 Years

CINCINNATI, Nov. 23—An engineering professor at the University of Cincinnati predicts the first types of atomic powered ships will "undoubtedly" ply the seas within five years.

Dr. Harold E. Hoelscher declared here that atomic power will be developed in the near future by private interests as a supplemental source of motive energy.

However, he could not foresee atomic power completely replacing other forms of energy within the next century.

made acute by a report that Adenauer has demanded a price tag for cooperation an assurance of Allied support for the goal of regaining Polish-occupied eastern territories seized during the war.

Potentially this issue of the lost provinces is very serious. It eventually could cause another world war and determine which way Germany jumps.

The Allies always have feared a German-Russian deal, remembering the 1939 Moscow-Berlin alliance and Russia's firm postwar effort to subjugate all of Germany.

As for Adenauer, he and his government leaders have feared an Allied-Russian deal. The German differences with the Western allies are caused by many factors but here are the main ones:

The Western high commissioners protest that West Germany should pay more of its way toward mutual rearmament costs. They point out that the Allies are furnishing troops for West German defense while Germany uses less of its national income for defense than do the Atlantic pact nations.

Adenauer argues that parliament never would ratify an agreement calling on Germany to pay at least ten per cent of its national income toward rearmament.

GERMANY presently wants to pay about five per cent or less of its national income. Adenauer's fears of parliament are based on the heavy opposition led by Social Democratic Leader Kurt Schumacher.

Another obstacle to agreement is Germany's fight for full sovereignty, and against the so-called Allied "reserve powers."

The Allies want to retain the right to intervene in West German domestic affairs if they deem it necessary to protect their own troops or their own concept of Democracy which they are trying to implant in the former enemy land.

Among these reserve powers the Allies would include the right to negotiate with Moscow on the final disposition of the eastern territories seized by Communist-ruled Poland.

The North Atlantic Council members who will meet in Rome this weekend have many staggering economic and military problems of their own.

Those problems will be greatly multiplied unless the Western leaders in Paris can reach a previous working arrangement with Adenauer whereby West Germany will contribute money and manpower to the common defense.

Vitamin Use Found To Bring Fatter Pigs

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23—Farmers are following the lead of nutrition experts by obtaining faster gains and savings on feed through the use of Vitamin B-12 and antibiotic supplements for pigs.

Recent tests at the Ohio Agricultural Station show that animals with these extras in their diets put on weight more rapidly and eat less feed in the long run than pigs with straight rations.

Researchers found that the animals required almost five per cent less feed for every unit of gain—and were ready for market 19 days earlier.

Supplement-fed pigs showed an average daily gain of about 1.63 pounds, compared to 1.41 pounds for the straight diet group.

Dollar-wise, the cost of these gains were not increased much by the extra expense.

The Ohio researchers believe that the chief effect of the supplement was to increase the consumption of feed.

In another series of tests, Michigan livestock specialists found that antibiotics were most effective when used during the creep feeding period and the time just after weaning.

They say antibiotics are not exactly cheap and that it is up to the farmer to decide if they should be used during the growing and fattening period.

Fumigation Said Needed On Many Farms In U.S.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23—Agriculture Department experts say farmers can save up to 300 million bushels of grain this year by following their suggestions for proper fumigation.

The experts figure that a little time and money will save about five per cent or more of the nation's stored grain and cereal products.

Most fumigants are mixtures of carbon tetrachloride and other chemicals, and are readily available under various trade names.

The experts say a tight bin is required for best results. Otherwise, the vapors may seep through the cracks and extra supplies will be needed to make up the loss.

Farmers can seal their bins easily if they tack laths or strips of heavy paper over the cracks. The job should be done on a day with little wind so that the vapors will not be carried away.

Gus Hall's Trial Due To Continue

NEW YORK, Nov. 23—Further argument will be heard Monday on Convicted Communist Leader Gus Hall's challenge of the government's right to institute contempt proceedings against him for jumping bail July 2.

The 41-year-old national secretary of the Communist Party and one of the 11 Reds convicted of conspiracy to teach and advocate overthrow of the U. S. government by force, was arrested in Mexico City Oct. 9, deported to the U. S.

Hall was charged with contempt of two court orders, one permitting him to travel to Ohio, and the other requiring him to surrender to begin serving his five-year jail sentence.

Mrs. FDR Lashes Red Propaganda

PARIS, Nov. 23—Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt charged in the UN Social Committee yesterday that Russia is spending three times as much as the United States on armaments and yet accuses America of waging war.

She said that the figure is "a sad commentary" on Russian protestations of peaceful aims.

She urged Russians "to drive to our countryside, see the number of television sets—and the large parking fields outside the factories—not for cars of the rich but for workers."

More Beef Coming For Consumers

Producer Plan Starts To Work

COLUMBUS, Nov. 23—More beef is on the way for consumers. Beef producers' plans and activities the last few years probably will begin to take effect after the first of the year.

C. W. Hammans, an extension economist at Ohio State university, explained that favorable conditions have induced beef producers to build up their herds—to get ready to increase production. Time when consumers will profit from producers' planning and work is almost here.

Hammans points out that cattle on the market today have been in production stages for about three years. From the time a beef cow is bred until her calf becomes meat averages about three years. Despite this and two other facts—population increase and the yield of about 100 pounds of beef by a 1,000 pound steer—consumers get more beef.

One reason producers have been building up herds is the favorable price of beef. Cattlemen also have had good pastures and feed supplies, both in the midwest and on ranges.

TO PRODUCE more beef, however, producers needed more breeding stock. Since 1928, estimated cattle numbers on farms have increased 16 of the 21 years. Farmers have been keeping heifer calves to replace old cows and to increase the total number of producing cows.

Chief reason why consumers had less beef this year than last year is that farmers were holding cattle to increase breeding herds—to increase production. Cattle numbers have increased on farms until the estimate for Jan. 1, 1952, is more than 90 million head.

Hammans said 90 million head is about all the cattle farms and ranches can feed safely. Unfavorable weather conditions often limit feed and pasture.

This means that the building up of breeding herds probably will not continue. Cattle will start moving to market.

Economic changes also might increase cattle marketing. Since farmers are carrying about all the cattle they can and since cattle require a large investment, farmers might increase marketing if economic conditions threatened.

Total Of 721 Titles Handled During October

Deputy clerks in Pickaway County clerk of courts office handled a total of 721 titles during October.

The October total was a decrease in nine in comparison with the 730 handled the month before, while considerably under the high 916 handled in August.

The clerks also handled a heavy traffic in liens last month, filing a total of 329 notations of liens and 307 lien cancellations.

The lien business remained steady last month in comparison with September's figures. In September, the clerks filed 327 liens while cancelling 308.

A total of 69 new autos were reported sold in the county during October, along with nine new trucks and two new school buses.

In September, only 51 new autos were sold, although the truck business was better with 17 new truck sales reported.

The People at Worship

JEHOVAH TAUGHT HIS ANCIENT PEOPLE HOW TO APPROACH HIM

Scripture—Exodus 24: 29-31; 35; 40.

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL
IT IS a thrilling moment when any Christian congregation builds a new church and dedicates it to the worship of God. The effectiveness of its work in its community thereafter depends on the devotion, loyalty and faith of its members, and their willingness to work with and for it and their pastor.

It is possible that few of the beautiful temples now being built in our country will have their read and thrill to the story of this holy place built in the wilderness while the children of Israel were on their way to the land that had been promised them.

The Lord told Moses to go up unto him with Aaron, his two sons, Nadab and Abihu, and 70 of the elders of Israel. Moses alone was allowed to come near the Lord, however.

Moses told the people Jehovah's words and judgments and they promised to obey him.

Early in the morning, Moses rose and built an altar under the hill, with 12 pillars "according to the 12 tribes of Israel." He offered sacrifices upon it, then he, Aaron, his two sons and the 70 elders went up on the mount.

"And they saw the God of Israel: and there was under his feet as it were a paved work of a sapphire stone, and as it were the body of heaven in His clearness."

"And the appearance of the glory of Jehovah was like the devouring fire on the top of the mount in the eyes of the children of Israel."

Then follow the instructions for the tabernacle's building and furnishing, to the most minute details, and the instructions for the priests that were to serve therein and the manner of preparing the sacrifices, and offering them on the altars.

"And there will I meet with the children of Israel; and the Tent shall be sanctified by My glory. And I will sanctify the tent of meeting, and the altar: Aaron also and his sons will I sanctify, to minister to me in the priest's office."

"And I will dwell among the children of Israel, and will be their God. And they shall know that I am Jehovah their God, that brought them forth out of the land of Egypt, that I might dwell

among them; I am Jehovah their God."

Moses gathered all the children of Israel together and said to them: "These are the words which the Lord hath commanded, that ye should do them," emphasizing that six days they were to labor, but on the seventh—the holy day—they were to do no work. The further commands of the Lord Moses gave them, saying:

"Take ye from among you an offering unto the Lord: whosoever is of a willing heart, let him bring it, an offering of the Lord; gold, and silver, and brass."

Then followed a long list of articles the people were to bring as gifts for the tabernacle.

"And all the congregation of the children of Israel departed from the presence of Moses."

"And they came, every one whose heart stirred him up, and every one whom his spirit made willing, and they brought the Lords offering to the work of the tabernacle of the congregation, and for all his service, and for the holy garments."

Wood, silver, brass, jewelry, cloth of blue and purple and scarlet, and fine linen, and goats' hair, and red skins of rams, and badgers' skins, they brought.

"And all the women that were wise hearted did spin with their hands, and brought that which they had spun, both of blue, and of purple, and of scarlet, and of fine linen."

"And the rulers brought onyx stones, and stones to be set, for the ephod, and for the breastplate; and spice, and oil for the light, and for the anointing oil, and for the sweet incense."

"The children of Israel brought a willing offering unto the Lord, every man and woman, whose heart made them willing to bring for all manner of work, which the Lord had commanded to be made by the hand of Moses."

Under Moses the work went on until, at last he lighted the lamps before the Lord in the finished and furnished temple, and "so Moses finished the work."

"Then a cloud covered the tent of the congregation and the glory of the Lord filled the tabernacle."

"And when the cloud was taken up from over the tabernacle, the children of Israel went onward in all their journeys:

"But if the cloud were not taken up, then they journeyed not till that day that it was taken up."

"For the cloud of the Lord was upon the tabernacle by day, and fire was on it by night, in the sight of all the house of Israel, throughout all their journeys."

This is the story of the building of one tabernacle by devoted and "willing hearts," the type of spirit we should all bring to the building and service of our own temples.

More Beef Coming For Consumers

Producers Plan Starts To Work

COLUMBUS, Nov. 23—More beef is on the way for consumers. Beef producers' plans and activities the last few years probably will begin to take effect after the first of the year.

C. W. Hammons, an extension economist at Ohio State university, explained that favorable conditions have induced beef producers to build up their herds—to get ready to increase production. Time when consumers will profit from producers' planning and work is almost here.

Hammons points out that cattle on the market today have been in production stages for about three years. From the time a beef cow is bred until her calf becomes meat averages about three years. Despite this and two other facts—population increase and the yield of about only 54 pounds of beef by a 1,000 pound steer—consumers get more beef.

One reason producers have been building up herds is the favorable price of beef. Cattlemen also have had good pastures and feed supplies, both in the midwest and on ranges.

TO PRODUCE more beef, however, producers needed more breeding stock. Since 1928, estimated cattle numbers on farms have increased 16 of the 21 years. Farmers have been keeping heifer calves to replace old cows and to increase the total number of producing cows.

Chief reason why consumers had less beef this year than last year is that farmers were holding cattle to increase breeding herds—to increase production. Cattle numbers have increased on farms until the estimate for Jan. 1, 1952, is more than 90 million head.

Hammons said 90 million head is about all the cattle farms and ranches can feed safely. Unfavorable weather conditions often limit feed and pasture.

This means that the building up of breeding herds probably will not continue. Cattle will start moving to market.

Economic changes also might increase cattle marketing. Since farmers are carrying about all the cattle they can and since cattle require a large investment, farmers might increase marketing if economic conditions threatened.

Total Of 721 Titles Handled During October

Deputy clerks in Pickaway County clerk of courts office handled a total of 721 titles during October. The October total was a decrease in nine in comparison with the 730 handled the month before, while considerably under the high 916 handled in August.

The clerks also handled a heavy traffic in liens last month, filing a total of 329 notations of liens and 307 lien cancellations. The lien business remained steady last month in comparison with September's figures. In September, the clerks filed 327 liens while cancelling 308.

A total of 69 new autos were reported sold in the county during October, along with nine new trucks and two new school buses.

In September, only 51 new autos were sold, although the truck business was better with 17 new truck sales reported.

The People at Worship

JEHOVAH TAUGHT HIS ANCIENT PEOPLE HOW TO APPROACH HIM

Scripture—Exodus 24: 29-31; 35: 40.

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL
IT IS a thrilling moment when any Christian congregation builds a new church and dedicates it to the worship of God. The effectiveness of its work in its community thereafter depends on the devotion, loyalty and faith of its members, and their willingness to work with and for it and their pastor.

It is possible that few of the beautiful temples now being built in our country will have their history written down so that people who live three thousand years from now can read it, as we read today the story of the building of the tabernacle which was erected by Moses under the minute instructions of Jehovah.

The list of detailed instructions which Moses received as to its building and furnishing, and of the order of worship prescribed by Jehovah, are far too long to recite in this column, but we can read and thrill to the story of this holy place built in the wilderness while the children of Israel were on their way to the land that had been promised them.

The Lord told Moses to go up unto Him with Aaron, his two sons, Nadab and Abihu, and 70 of the elders of Israel. Moses alone was allowed to come near the Lord, however.

Moses told the people Jehovah's words and judgments and they

among them: I am Jehovah their God."

Moses gathered all the children of Israel together and said to them: "These are the words which the Lord hath commanded, that ye should do them," emphasizing that six days they were to labor, but on the seventh—the holy day—they were to do no work. The further commands of the Lord Moses gave them, saying:

"Take ye from among you an offering unto the Lord: whosoever is of a willing heart, let him bring it, an offering of the Lord; gold, and silver, and brass."

Then followed a long list of articles the people were to bring as gifts for the tabernacle.

"And all the congregation of the children of Israel departed from the presence of Moses.

"And they came, every one whose heart stirred him up, and every one whom his spirit made willing, and they brought the Lords offering to the work of the tabernacle of the congregation, and for all his service, and for the holy garments."

Wood, silver, brass, jewelry, cloth of blue and purple and scarlet, and fine linen, and goats' hair, and red skins of rams, and badgers' skins, they brought.

"And all the women that were wise hearted did spin with their hands, and brought that which they had spun, both of blue, and promised to obey Him.

Early in the morning, Moses rose and built an altar under the hill, with 12 pillars "according to the 12 tribes of Israel." He offered sacrifices upon it, then he, Aaron, his two sons and the 70 elders went up on the mount.

"And they saw the God of Israel: and there was under His feet as it were a paved work of a sapphire stone, and as it were the body of heaven in His clearness."

"And the appearance of the glory of Jehovah was like the devouring fire on the top of the mount in the eyes of the children of Israel."

Then follow the instructions for the tabernacle's building and furnishing, to the most minute details, and the instructions for the priests that were to serve therein and the manner of preparing the sacrifices, and offering them on the altars.

"And there will I meet with the children of Israel; and the Tent shall be sanctified by My glory. And I will sanctify the tent of meeting, and the altar: Aaron also and his sons will I sanctify, to minister to me in the priest's office."

"And I will dwell among the children of Israel, and will be their God. And they shall know that I am Jehovah their God, that brought them forth out of the land of Egypt, that I might dwell of purple, and of scarlet, and of fine linen."

"And the rulers brought onyx stones, and stones to be set, for the ephod, and for the breastplate; and spice, and oil for the light, and for the anointing oil, and for the sweet incense."

"The children of Israel brought a willing offering unto the Lord, every man and woman, whose heart made them willing to bring for all manner of work, which the Lord had commanded to be made by the hand of Moses."

Under Moses the work went on until, at last he lighted the lamps before the Lord in the finished and furnished temple, and "so Moses finished the work."

"Then a cloud covered the tent of the congregation and the glory of the Lord filled the tabernacle. "And when the cloud was taken up from over the tabernacle, the children of Israel went onward in all their journeys:

"But if the cloud were not taken up, then they journeyed not till that day that it was taken up. "For the cloud of the Lord was upon the tabernacle by day, and fire was on it by night, in the sight of all the house of Israel, throughout all their journeys."

Polio Vaccine In Offing, So Says O'Connor

ATLANTA, Nov. 23—The president of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis says "it is only a matter of time" until scientists discover a vaccine which can be used as a preventive inoculation against polio.

Basil O'Connor, in Atlanta to address volunteer workers of the polio drive, said "we are on the way" toward making the discovery of a polio vaccine. He added, "and we expect to get it."

O'Connor said there are three types of virus which cause infantile paralysis. He pointed out:

"Up until a year and a half ago, the virus was obtained from monkeys, imported from India and vaccinated with the disease. The virus now can be produced in a test tube, which gives a greater leeway for scientific research than the slower process with monkeys. It makes the virus available in quantity."

O'Connor said controlled research last summer, which included vaccination of 3,000 children with gamma globulin, "disclosed nothing." He added:

"However this was only one test. At least three or four other tests must be made to know the effectivetiveness of gamma globulin. We do know the immunity is only temporary—three or four months at the most."

Lowest recorded temperature is 90 degrees below zero, registered at Verkhoyansk, Siberia, U.S.S.R., Feb. and 7, 1892.

Local Registered Nurses Plan Civil Defense Work

Registered nurses in Pickaway County will play an important part in the district civilian defense set-up not only in case of an atomic attack or war, but also in disasters.

Taking the lead, as far as local organizations active in civilian defense work are concerned, the Pickaway County Registered Nurses Association intends to concentrate on treatment of different phases of atomic injury, as well as other effects of a possible bomb.

The local group, organized for civilian defense, is part of the national CD set-up.

Apathy and indifference to civilian defense needs in the local community has prompted the registered nurses group to begin study on measures necessary to cope with an atomic attack in the area.

Seventeen members of the group met this week with Mrs. Phil Smith, East Union street, when a paper describing the radiation effects of an atomic bomb on water, food and milk was presented.

THE PAPER was written by Miss Jeanne Burns and read by Mrs. Arthur K. Bowman.

It explained that during the first 24 to 72 hours following an atomic bomb explosion, nurses might be required to work almost alone under adverse conditions, and to make decisions as to the safety of using water, food and milk which were in the area covered by the blast.

In a zone of serious damage to buildings, it is estimated that the destruction of fire hydrants together with the loss of water from broken service mains might result in an instantaneous loss of water.

Water for drinking, preparing medications, cleansing wounds and nursing procedures would be needed, and emergency hospitals which care for blast victims should be situated where a water supply is obtainable from a distant watershed, or from deep drilled wells, and brought into the hospital without exposure.

If water is pumped by electric power, some other auxiliary power should be available at the pumping station, the study explained, since it is likely that the source of power will be damaged by the atomic explosion.

In the event of an air burst that

Thieves Sought

COLUMBUS, Nov. 23—Police today sought safecrackers who robbed the Hoosier Engineering Co. of Columbus of between $200 and $300 after tearing off the safe's door with two hammers and chisels yesterday.

is not followed by rain, all water outside the immediate zone of complete damage will be free from contamination. After a ground burst, effective filtration would remove a large percentage of contamination.

WITHOUT filtration, it was pointed out, radio-activity present in water has a short life and in a few days the water can be again used for any purpose.

Following any type of atomic explosion, water taken directly from deep wells that are sealed at the top will also be free from contamination even though the surrounding ground is contaminated by radioactive dust or mist.

In preparation for an attack, water should be taken from wells and placed in containers sealed to prevent contamination from radioactive dust.

After a blast, water taken from the main within a few minutes after the explosion would also be safe to use. Boiling does not remove radioactivity nor does chlorination.

Ice, frozen in undamaged cold storage plants, would be safe to use when melted.

In her study, Miss Burns also pointed out that a small emergency supply of distilled water might be secured from drug stores, filling stations and garages.

Water taken from the public supply before an atomic explosion and stored in sealed containers would also be safe.

Little information is available about the expected contamination of milk and food.

IN AN AIR blast little residual contamination of milk and food is expected, unless the food is damaged or contaminated by soil.

Canned foods in undamaged cans would be free from radioactivity even though the outside of the can is contaminated. Meat and other perishable foods in undamaged refrigerators would also be relatively free from effects of the radioactivity.

Milk in covered cans or bottles remaining in undamaged cans or bottles remaining in undamaged refrigerators following an explosion would also be considered reasonably safe.

The study also showed that unbroken eggs would be safe to eat, but that the outside of the containers and eggs would have to be washed in safe water before they are opened.

The report concluded that vegetables in exposed areas would be considered contaminated, but that vegetables that require peeling or shelling such as potatoes, carrots, onions, peas and lima beans should provide edible portions that are free from contamination, if they are carefully prepared.

11 Oriental Brides Arrive

TOKYO, Nov. 23—One Chinese and ten Korean war brides have arrived in Tokyo enroute with their GI husbands to new homes in the United States.

In the group were two baby boys and a girl.

The bridegrooms are enlisted men who have spent from two to almost four years in Korea—all as members of the Korean Military Advisory Group (KMAG) which worked with the South Korean army even before war broke out.

To marry the girls, the soldiers had to overcome legal hurdles placed in their path by the Army which tries to prevent hasty marriages.

Scotch Liquor Supply Skimpy

COLUMBUS, Nov. 23—Scotch drinkers may have a tougher time celebrating the holiday season in "grand style" but for those who settle for bourbon, the future's just rosy.

The state liquor department says its count of Scotch to be available for the Christmas "rush" is only 15,000 cases.

Liquor Director William C. Bryant said however, that the supply of bourbon and all other brands are "adequate."

Dating Is Help To Grades, So Study Reveals

BOWLING GREEN, Nov. 23—A Findlay high school teacher said today that dating and good grades of pupils generally go hand-in-hand.

Ellsworth S. Statler, a junior high school teacher whose research was reported in a master's degree thesis accepted at Bowling Green State university, said high school youngsters whose parents encourage dating usually make better grades than those whose parents object to dating.

Statler said girls date more frequently than the boys of the same age because girls belong to some organizations where they ask boys for dates and because there are fewer girls than boys.

Using Findlay high school juniors and seniors for his research, Statler said he found that frequency of dating increases with age and that most boys and girls begin dating at 14.

Contending that better grades are made by those who date "because the dates fulfill certain desires which tend to reduce worry and feelings of inferiority," Statler said the Findlay high school youths "seem to be dating with sound and genuine thought."

"At school, parties and even at church, few girls and fewer boys ever want to be with her. They all call her a little pest. Ans.—You seem to understand this girl's situation very well—she wants to be friendly, but doesn't know how. She certainly needs a friend in this way—she needs to be told what's wrong so she can mend her ways.

Why not tell her exactly what you've written here? She may not like it at first, but if she has a brain under her hair-do, she'll try to change in order to have friends, fun and dates. Explain to her that her silly antics are ruining her chances for more popularity. If she doesn't turn over a new leaf afterward, you'd better give her up as hopeless to save your own popularity.

MORE FAMILY DOCTORS?

CONTRARY to a widely held impression that the old "family" doctors were rapidly being replaced by specialists, it is now revealed that there is a "renaissance of the general practitioner." If true, this is a trend in the opposite direction from that of World War II and its immediate aftermath.

In war surgeons are in great demand, and in time of peace the pecuniary rewards of the established specialist outstrip those of the general practitioner.

But the need for "family" doctors, capable of treating any ordinary ailment and possessing the confidence and friendship of their patients is persistent. The "renaissance" was announced to the New York State Academy of General Practice in the presence of 1,100 physicians by Dr. Wingate M. Johnson of the School of Medicine of Wake Forest College.

Dr. Johnson asserted that for five consecutive years the proportion of students planning to become general practitioners has been on the increase, and that there are now general practice residencies in 73 hospitals.

If the general practitioner were to sit back content with prescribing and doing what was customary 20 or 10 years ago, more frequent recourse to specialists would be necessary. But the Academy of General Practice insists its members avail themselves of postgraduate courses especially prepared for them, and requires 150 hours of work in the mevery three years.

That ought to keep the family doctor up on progress in diagnosis and therapy, even though most major operations are performed by specialists.

DIMINISHING RETURNS

HAS THE recent increase in rail freight rates brought the law of diminishing returns into operation? It is a pertinent question. Gross revenues of Class I railroads in September, the first full month the rate increase was in effect, totaled $855,928,000 compared to $872,032,000 in September, 1950.

Obviously the decline reflected a smaller volume of freight. This fact is impressive in the light of figures which show that last August, the month before the increased rates went into effect, there was an increase in gross over August of the previous year.

A slowdown of industrial activity in September compared to a year ago might explain the month's loss of railroad gross. The general preliminary business indicator, however, does not show this to have been the case, lending weight to the assumption that there was diversion of considerable freight to other forms of transportation.

Many events go down in history. Unfortunately some of them don't stay down.

These Days

The Pentagon had photographic and detailed information concerning the Korean atrocities when Gen. Douglas MacArthur was in command there. That the Chinese Communists were killing American prisoners of war therefore was known to all intelligence agencies operating in Korea. The suppression of the story was obviously political so that the United Nations, our British allies, and the Soviet Chinese enemy might not be embarrassed.

If this statement is doubted or challenged, there is one way of disproving it. A congressional committee can put MacArthur, Gen. Charles A. Willoughby, and Gen. Walter Bedell Smith of the Central Intelligence Agency on the witness stand and have them testify under oath. I am sure that in open session, under oath, at least two of them will testify that the information Col. James M. Hanley disclosed was sent to the Pentagon through channels. A competent investigation would traverse those channels to the highest authority who received the facts and details of the massacres and ordered their suppression.

This is a serious charge to make and I do it only because I have traversed some areas of this problem and know that, so far as I can go, the facts are as here stated. To go further would require the power of subpoena.

There is another point to make. From 1913 to 1931, I was with Chinese armies, often being very close to their commanders in personal friendships. During that entire period, I never saw a prisoner of war camp although the Chinese were then at war against each other, killing off huge numbers. I am sure that I saw the first modern military hospital at Shanghai, operated by Drs. W. S. and W. L. New, Chinese educated in England and the United States, but I never even heard of a prisoner of war camp.

The usual method of handling defeated enemies was to disarm them and send them home or to incorporate them in the conquering army. I have witnessed both processes. As a Chinese soldier's tool is his rifle, his problem used to be to keep that instrument as a private possession. A soldier with a rifle had a better chance of getting into the conquering army than a soldier without one.

The vanquished soldiers who were disarmed and sent home usually joined some bandit band which was engaged in ravishing the country either in association with a local war-lord or against him. I have known bandits of both kinds. In North China, the role of bandit and soldier was interchangeable with startling constancy.

I have witnessed soldiers being strung on poles or their heads put on top of bridges as a symbol to frighten others. In my day in China, this was not unusual and was accepted casually.

The cost of maintaining, feeding and guarding prisoners of war is high in any country. In a low standard of living country like China, the cost is beyond the means of armies which are living off the country. Therefore, when it was impossible to send disarmed soldiers home or impractical to incorporate them in the conqueror's army, the cheapest way to handle the situation was to kill them.

MOLLIE went on relating to Peter how Clara Wayne had distorted the history of Emmy Bradshaw's pregnancy.

"And then the great day came. Emmy went over to Maternity. Had to be carried, according to Clara. Maybe she did go by ambulance, I don't remember. But Clara built us all up to such a fine state of suspense that we were ripe for her dramatic announcement that a e.s. had been necessary, and Emmy was very ill. She'd be in the hospital for at least three weeks."

"That was easily checked!"

"And was. I knew she wasn't on surgery and told Clara so at once."

"Wait—I can guess! Surgical floor was too crowded."

Mollie laughed merrily. "It was indeed. So I dropped in on Emmy."

"And the truth . . ."

"The e.s. collapsed into an epistom."

"Certainly, if she was so fat."

Mollie nodded. "And the long hospital stay was solely due to an argument Emmy was having with Irvine. She'd been a nurse, remember, and had never been sold on the new method of getting a patient immediately out of bed. She didn't intend to run any such risks herself."

"Yeah, I've met up with that, too. It's better when a patient doesn't know a thing about medicine."

"But you see what I mean about the fun of pearl diving. It does one good thing; you get so interested in hunting for the speck of truth, that you don't get as shocked and mad at Clara's lies as you might. Emmy did have a baby, and we all had a most interesting time. And nobody was hurt unless it was Dr. Irvine's blood pressure."

"He could take a little weight himself," mused Peter. Then he pulled his feet toward him, and stretched his arms. "I'll have to hunt the old sack," he said regretfully. "Five a. m. comes mighty early in the morning." He stood up, smiling down at Mollie. "Don't get up," he suggested. "It's been a wonderful evening. Good dinner, open fire—easy talk. I'm going on O.E. surgery, and you've given me a lead on Irvine. . . ."

"You won't tell him to reduce, I hope!"

"No, but I like to understand the Staffs I work under." He pulled on his coat, wrapped his scarf around his neck, thrust his hands into his gloves.

"You should have a hat," Mollie fussed.

"I don't own a hat. Never have owned one. Never wore one except my college mortar-board. It felt funny." He smiled again. His voice deepened. "Night, Mollie. It was swell."

The door closed upon him, she heard the elevator rise, descend. She sat on, thinking about Peter, smiling softly.

Try, Stop Me

At a testimonial dinner last month I had the deep pleasure of sitting next to Jimmy Schnozola Durante. One of the speakers, singing the praises of the distinguished guest of honor, intoned "and in addition to all his other accomplishments, our friend is a keen and tireless bibliophile." Durante whispered hoarsely in my ear, "If any man ever called me a fine line dat, I'd bust him right in de nose."

My pet aversions in radio and television at the moment are those ham actors who turn up endlessly on commercials in white surgical robes to report on complicated and dreary laboratory tests for dentifrices and cigarettes. And what's so wonderful, incidentally, about every cigarette being so mild nobody can even taste it? Maybe those sponsors are miscalculating the toughness of male smokers. I have a notion that the first cigarette m.e.k. who announces a brand that's so strong, pungent, and full-bodied it will knock your teeth out will sell a billion packs in two weeks.

when United Nations forces in Korea were threatened with total defeat. Then the military wanted models frozen, and ordered an all-out production to supply deficiencies at once.

Now the feeling is that the world for the present will have a breathing spell. Although tensions still exist no general war is anticipated for at least the next nine months.

Nevertheless, some civilian officials aren't so sure—and are pressing for definite decisions on models and production.

● MORE DOLLAR TROUBLES—Conservative estimates are that England and France will soon be looking to Uncle Sam for about $3 billion to keep their home economies from floundering. The requests, of course, will not be put as bluntly as that.

It is anticipated that the two overseas governments will make their demands on grounds that it's all to the good of the Western World and that it will aid in the fight against Communism.

The Churchill government is expected to ask about $2 billion more, while France is said to be in need of about $1 billion for imports and freight.

If the United States grants the dollars—and there is every indication that this will be the case—they will be in addition to, and separate from the military billions already earmarked for Western Europe.

● TRUMAN AND WASHINGTON—President Truman recently be-littled George Washington's feat of tossing a coin across the Rappahannock river—and all but called the Father of His Country a tightwad. Mr. Truman's remarks—all in fun—were made to a group of cartoonists who volunteered to help the government sell more defense bonds.

The President pointed out that many people think Washington threw a silver dollar across the Potomac. In reality, Mr. Truman said, it was a Spanish piece of eight, and it was thrown across the Rappahannock.

The President added with a sly grin and a twinkle in his eye: "If you go down there and take a look at the place where Washington lived—any 10-year-old boy could throw a dime across that place."

"However, I am doubtful that Washington, with his acquisitive habits, would ever let loose that Spanish piece of eight."

lieved, as she acknowledged to herself—when Nicholas phoned a day or two before Christmas and invited her to dinner.

In his usual unaccented manner, he told her this was a charity call. "Dinner will be served at four to all lonely spinsters."

"Oh, Nicholas, you know I don't like big parties."

She could fairly see the grin about his lips. "In that case," he said gravely, "I'll invite only young and beautiful ones with yellow hair."

She chuckled, said she'd be there and hung up. Now, Christmas day promised to be fairly bright. She and Peter were going to the candlelight service at the Cathedral on Christmas Eve. Whatever size or sort of party Nicholas had planned, she would enjoy it. She rather hoped there would be only the two of them.

The dinner was small, but not that small. Eight people sat around the beautiful table, ate the delicious food, shared the clever talk. The guests were the conductor of the Symphony and his wife, both French; the resident artist at the University and the exquisite Chinese woman whom he had recently married; a leading industrialist of the city and the handsome, exotic divorcee about to become his wife, Mollie, and Nicholas. They were interesting people, the women all beautiful—Mollie was at ease with them, and yet—

During the dinner, and the hour or so which followed, she found herself studying Nicholas, wondering about him. This was the man who "needed" her, on whom she must "work!" Ha! He was busily engaged with his own chores. He was showing Mollie something on this Christmas day; she tried to avoid consideration of the lesson he offered her.

In spite of the wistful way in which she had been missing him, the criticism implied in his lesson angered her. If he was trying to show her what she was missing, if he was pointing a finger at the way she must live without him . . .

Mollie would show him that she could live without him! In the end, she might concede—

On the next day, which was also something of a holiday since Christmas itself had fallen on Sunday, Clara invited Mollie and Peter for supper. In the first place, Mollie would not have accepted this invitation had the dinner at Nicholas' been different. Even as things were, she was inclined to refuse, but Peter ingeniously said that he could see no reason why they shouldn't go—and it might be fun. He hadn't any other date—so go they did.

Fresh from the stimulation of her evening in Nicholas' exquisite house, of being with his friends who were no less exquisite, the impact of Clara Wayne's home was terrific. Stepping into that cozy, bright living room, Mollie was swept with an immediate wonder

Mass X-Rays Help Detect TB

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

IN 1900, 202 persons out of every 100,000 in the United States were reported as having tuberculosis. In 1948, only 30 per 100,000 were reported as suffering from this disease. Tuberculosis, formerly dreaded as the "white death," is thus becoming less and less significant in this country.

However, about 1,000 Americans are reported as dying each week from tuberculosis, which is still the leading cause of death between the ages of 15 and 35.

Mass Surveys Helpful

The decline in the death rate and number of cases has been credited in part, at least, to the mass tuberculosis surveys throughout the country. These surveys to uncover hidden cases are very helpful in preventing tuberculosis. Every citizen might well have at least one chest X-ray a year, not only to help himself, but to help his community strike out this terrible disease.

Tuberculosis sometimes tends to be not too explosive at first, and many persons with mild cases are walking the streets without any pronounced symptoms. But these persons can easily spread the disease to others. It is these cases in which discovery is important, for it can prevent further spread in the individual himself and to the general population.

As the disease progresses, it brings the symptoms of coughing, spitting up blood, loss of weight, night sweats, and general weakness.

Many Advances

The past few years have seen many advances in the treatment and care of tuberculosis. One of these has been the use of streptomycin, which is effective in early cases. Many a case has been benefited by this drug, used together with early surgical procedure, such as collapse of the lung and injection of air into the pleural cavity. Another drug known as PAS (para-aminosalicylic acid) has recently been found helpful in certain cases when used with streptomycin.

Certain far-advanced cases, in which part of the lung has been destroyed, were formerly believed incurable. However, lung surgery has become more and more perfected, and parts of the diseased lung or even the whole lung have been removed in these cases with excellent results.

Slowly but surely is this disease being conquered.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

C. P. R.: What would cause a discharge from the navel of an infant?

Answer: The most common cause of discharge from the navel is an infection in that area. However, it may be due to an abnormal passage between the bowel or bladder and the navel.

It would be advisable to have the infant examined by a physician as soon as possible to determine the cause of this condition.

She chuckled, said she'd be there and hung up. Now, Christmas day promised to be fairly bright. She and Peter were going to the candlelight service at the Cathedral on Christmas Eve. Whatever size or sort of party Nicholas had planned, she would enjoy it. She rather hoped there would be only the two of them.

The dinner was small, but not that small. Eight people sat around the beautiful table, ate the delicious food, shared the clever talk. The guests were the conductor of the Symphony and his wife, both French; the resident artist at the University and the exquisite Chinese woman whom he had recently married; a leading industrialist of the city and the handsome, exotic divorcee about to become his wife, Mollie. And Nicholas. They were interesting people, the women all beautiful—Mollie was at ease with them, and yet—

During the dinner, and the hour or so which followed, she found herself studying Nicholas, wondering about him. This was the man who "needed" her, on whom she must "work!" Ha! He was busily engaged with his own chores. He was showing Mollie something on this Christmas day; she tried to avoid consideration of the lesson he offered her.

In spite of the wistful way in which she had been missing him, the criticism implied in his lesson angered her. If he was trying to show her what she was missing, if he was pointing a finger at the way she must live without him—Mollie would show him that she could live without him! In the end, she might concede—

On the next day, which was also something of a holiday since Christmas itself had fallen on Sunday, Clara invited Mollie and Peter for supper. In the first place, Mollie would not have accepted this invitation had the dinner at Nicholas' been—different. Even as things were, she was inclined to refuse, but Peter ingeniously said that he could see no reason why they shouldn't go—and it might be fun. He hadn't any other date—so go they did.

Fresh from the stimulation of her evening in Nicholas' exquisite house, of being with his friends, who were no less exquisite, the impact of Clara Wayne's home was terrific. Stepping into that cozy, bright living room, Mollie was swept with an immediate wonder

The past few years have seen many advances in the treatment and care of tuberculosis. One of these has been the use of streptomycin, which is effective in early cases. Many a case has been benefited by this drug, used together with early surgical procedure, such as collapse of the lung and injection of air into the pleural cavity. Another drug, known as PAS (para-aminosalicylic acid) has recently been found helpful in certain cases when used with streptomycin.

Certain far-advanced cases, in which part of the lung has been destroyed, were formerly believed incurable. However, lung surgery has become more and more perfected, and parts of the diseased lung or even the whole lung have been removed in these cases with excellent results.

Slowly but surely is this disease being conquered.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

C. P. R.: What would cause a discharge from the navel of an infant?

Answer: The most common cause of discharge from the navel is an infection in that area. However, it may be due to an abnormal passage between the bowel or bladder and the navel.

It would be advisable to have the infant examined by a physician as soon as possible to determine the cause of this condition.

ONE MAN'S OPINION

The fellow who couldn't find something to be thankful for yesterday just wasn't trying.

We have people pouring in every day who are thankful just for a sight of the Statue of Liberty which we take for granted.

Of course Miss Liberty's torch is smoking a little, but there's nothing wrong with it that a little wick-trimming won't fix.

But busting a wish-bone today won't do it.

A historian pointed out the other day that no republic since the beginning of history ever has lasted as long as 200 years and as we haven't broken the record yet let's not assume that the oil supply for Liberty's lamp is guaranteed to eternity.

That's a cold fact to serve up with a warm dinner, but life is not all warm mince pie—on the table or in the sky.

Let us give thanks for what we have; then let's peel our coats and fight to keep it.

President May Keep Mum
On Candidacy Until 1952

HST Could Defeat Taft,
He Thinks—But Gen. Ike?

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—Don't look for President Truman to announce his candidacy for re-election until well into 1952—possibly just before the Democratic convention in July. Political experts say there are increasing indications that Mr. Truman will run again, but they don't expect him to say so until April or May, at the earliest.

Some say the President's strategy apparently is to keep mum until he finds out what Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower is going to do. This strategy also partly blocks Dixiecrat plans for a revolt within the Democratic party.

The avowed candidacy of Ohio's Senator Robert A. Taft for the GOP nomination increases the chances that Mr. Truman will run again. The President has made it clear he would welcome a race against Taft.

While Mr. Truman is confident he would beat Taft, his views toward Eisenhower as a candidate may be somewhat different. For that reason he's probably going to adopt a wait-and-see attitude.

● DEFENSE SLOWDOWN—Word is being passed around in official circles that there is a definite slowdown in production of tanks, planes and other weapons. The reason given is that the military wants more work done to remove the "bugs" from the latest models, and therefore is not willing to freeze models at their present stage of development, for large-scale production.

This is said to be in contrast with the attitude of the military

Story Of Ohio Institute Told By Mrs. J. F. Bell

"Few Ohioans realize the Battelle Memorial Institute in Columbus is the largest independent research organization in America."

Speaking before Monday Club, Mrs. J. F. Bell detailed the history, activities, and accomplishments of this Columbus Institute in a paper entitled, "Pioneers in Progress." She said:

"A product of the American system of free enterprise, the Institute was founded in 1928 and '29 by Gordon Battelle, the son of an Ohio industrialist with extensive Ohio industrialist."

The laboratory, which started with 30 scientists, now has a staff of 1600 scientists, technicians, and service personnel.

"Battelle provides its facilities on a non-profit basis to industrial concerns, individuals, or government agencies who contract for its research services."

Mrs. Bell detailed some of the many varied fields in which the Institute is conducting research.

"Battelle developments have included a new steel alloy for watch springs, a revolutionary smokeless stove, a paint which protects ship bottoms from barnacle growth, and an 'Obotron' is an electrically driven tuning fork to provide accurate pitch."

"Every development and invention becomes the property of the industry, individual, or government agency sponsoring the research."

In conclusion, Mrs. Bell stated, "It would be difficult to estimate how much all of us benefit from the independent research carried on at Battelle Memorial Institute."

During the business meeting all members were reminded to bring an unwrapped Christmas gift December 3, to be sent to Girls Industrial School. This annual club project is under the supervision of Mrs. N. L. Cochran.

Story Of Ohio Institute Told By Mrs. J. F. Bell

"Few Ohioans realize the Battelle Memorial Institute in Columbus is the largest independent research organization in America."

Speaking before Monday Club, Mrs. J. F. Bell detailed the history, activities, and accomplishments of this Columbus Institute in a paper entitled, "Pioneers in Progress." She said:

"A product of the American system of free enterprise, the Institute was founded in 1928 and '29 by Gordon Battelle, the son of an Ohio industrialist with extensive Ohio industrialist."

"The laboratory, which started with 30 scientists, now has a staff of 1600 scientists, technicians, and service personnel."

"Battelle provides its facilities on a non-profit basis to industrial concerns, individuals, or government agencies who contract for its research services."

Mrs. Bell detailed some of the many varied field in which the Institute is conducting research.

"Battelle developments have included a new steel alloy for watch springs, a revolutionary smokeless stove, a paint which protects ship bottoms from barnacle growth, and an 'Obotron,' is an electrically driven tuning fork to provide accurate pitch."

"Every development and invention becomes the property of the industry, individual, or government agency sponsoring the research."

In conclusion, Mrs. Bell stated, "It would be difficult to estimate how much all of us benefit from the independent research carried on at Battelle Memorial Institute."

During the business meeting all members were reminded to bring an unwrapped Christmas gift December 3, to be sent to Girls Industrial School. This annual club project is under the supervision of Mrs. N. L. Cochran.

Child Problems and Solutions

By GARRY CLEVELAND MYERS, PhD

As you know, I don't dwell in this column on weaknesses of teachers, but on their strengths and try to celebrate successes in them. This may be one reason why so many mothers write me of wonderful persons who teach their children.

Another reason is that there are so many of these fine teachers. I've seen a lot of them in the classroom throughout the United States.

When I compare classroom teachers I saw there some years ago with the teachers as I have seen them in more recent years, I'm impressed with the growing majority who cultivate a comfortable, friendly classroom atmosphere and treat children as precious persons.

Of course, the best teacher, when she has an overworked classroom and many children who have not been well-disciplined at home in self-control, self-reliance and responsibility, is hampered, no matter how considerate she is of her pupils as persons or skillful at helping them to learn. We parents help all teachers to be better teachers by educating our children at home in due regards for the rights of others, in waiting on themselves and in sharing in home duties.

LET US REMEMBER that, because of teacher shortage, especially in the elementary grades, there are many teachers not well-trained professionally, on which account they may not gain best results from their efforts. Even among them are many conscientious ones who have great understanding and appreciation of children.

And think of all the teachers, regardless of their training, who lie awake at night worrying because they have not always felt successful with all their children and are very much discouraged over certain ones. Indeed, some of these teachers, like some parents, expect too much of themselves and underestimate the degree of their own successes. We parents can, by trying to understand and appreciate these teachers better, cheer their hearts and heighten their morale.

Oh, yes, there are a few teachers whose hearts are not in their work, who don't really love children or understand them and their homes—who seem not to care.

But such are relatively few in number, though some of my readers are sure their children have such teachers.

Most teachers are very wonderful, indeed, and they grow more wonderful as we parents get wholeheartedly back of them and build in our children a high regard for these teachers: when, moreover, we build regard for them by the way we act toward them and speak of them in all our social contacts.

Far more than we may realize, we parents not only help our children directly to succeed at school, but we also help their teachers succeed and thus further the kind of school we are happy to have our children attend.

Answering Parents' Questions

Q. I am worried over our son, ten years old, at school that I go to see the teacher about once a week about him. But matters don't improve much.

A. You go too often, causing the child and his classmates to feel he is over-mothered. Also, the teacher may feel sometimes that you are a nuisance. Try to train this child at home in greater self-reliance and responsibility.

Q. We are worried because our children spend so much time with radio and television that they seem to have but little time or interest for reading.

A. This is a growing problem which means that parents should regulate and limit the time their children spend on radio and television; and that they also need to strive harder to stimulate these children from their very early years in good books and reading.

CLEVELAND, Nov. 23 — Congressman William H. Ayers of Akron believes more businessmen and less lawyers are needed in government.

Ayers, Republican representative from the 14th district, told 600 members of the Al Koran shrine in Cleveland last night "that the government is the biggest business in the world."

He charged that "it is the least businesslike of businesses, even though business ideas can be applied in government." He added that too many lawyers view government "from the technical and legal standpoint."

Youngstown Tax Deal Is Studied

YOUNGSTOWN, Nov. 23—Youngstown Law Director H. Herschel Hunt today studied an appellate court ruling to determine whether the city's fight for its one percent corporation tax should be continued.

Hunt said he would take no immediate action on the sixth district court of appeals ruling in Toledo upholding a lower court decision which invalidated the tax.

The city has 20 days in which to make an appeal from the ruling, which also affected similar tax by the city of Campbell.

Editors' Roundtable

"Editors Roundtable" is a twice-a-week release based on a study of an average of about 150 daily newspaper editorial pages. The major issue of the day is analyzed and digested, passed on to readers as a survey of opinion from the nation's leading editors. It is the "voice of the press."

RAYBURN'S APPEAL

With most editorial comment so far coming from Southern papers, majority opinion dislikes, on principle, Speaker Rayburn's appeal to the South to stay in the Democratic Party to avoid loss of congressional chairmanships through a Republican victory. But a large minority of editors argues that the South's present influence in Congress is its best hope of defending the principles it espouses. In continuing, nationwide discussion, some editors feel that only a 1952 Democratic platform acceptable to the South will prevent a party split. But majority opinion is that the South's course in 1952 will depend on various factors.

EL PASO Times (Dem.): "Today, Southern Democrats hold many, if not most, of the chairmanships in the Senate and House. As Speaker Sam Rayburn told the Southern Governors' Conference... a Southern revolt would only elect a Republican President... and every Southern man who holds a responsible place in Congress will lose his position. If Southern Democrats want to retain the leadership in Congress and continue to hold the balance of power they would do well to stick by the Democratic Party, but use their influence to clean up objectionable features of that party's present policies."

CHARLOTTE (N.C.) Observer (Ind.-Dem.): "If Southern Democrats would heed Rayburn's appeal, it would mean they would vote to continue and extend the status quo... in order that Democratic Party leaders... can continue in the posts of speaker and chairmen of Senate and House committees. This in itself is good for the Nation and advantageous to the South, but it's not enough. Intelligence should be the guide and not blind obedience to a party that no longer stands for the principles that originally inspired the kind of loyalty that Rayburn urges."

NASHVILLE Tennessean (Dem.): "Rayburn's plea for support for the party that has been the

How to make old roads seem NEW

PICK a road that you know by heart. Not too good a road. One that has some bumps—some unbanked turns—a tough hill or two.

Then get in touch with us, and let us put you behind the wheel of a Buick, with Dynaflo Drive.*

Now you're all set for a new experience. You'll find out this:

Those bumps seem to lose their bobble. You just take them with a smooth and level stride.

Those unbanked turns don't seem so sharp, and those hills seem almost to flatten out.

How come? Well, a lot of things are different when you travel in a Buick.

You're riding on big, soft coil springs that let every wheel dance beneath you, without passing on the jolts to you in the car.

You're driving a car that's plenty inches broader than it is high—a sure-footed road-hugger if there ever was one.

And you're riding behind a Fireball Engine—Buick's time-tested version of a high-compression valve-in-head—an engine that packs more power than most people ever need to use.

With this power—and with Dynaflo Drive*—you don't have to "rush" a hill at the bottom to soar serenely over the top. You just feed the power as you need it—climb with a sure, steady swoop without buck or bobble all the way up.

There's a lot more that we could tell you about a Buick. But such things as room, and comfort, the confident way it steers, and the way it shortens the miles are things you can best discover from personal experience.

So why not follow the routine already suggested? You supply the road—we'll supply the car—and let it speak for itself.

Editors' Roundtable

"Editors' Roundtable" is a twice-a-week release based on a study of an average of about 150 daily newspaper editorial pages. The major issue of the day is analyzed and digested, passed on to readers as a survey of opinion from the nation's leading editors. It is the "voice of the press."

RAYBURN'S APPEAL

With most editorial comment so far coming from Southern papers, majority opinion dislikes, on principle, Speaker Rayburn's appeal to the South to stay in the Democratic Party to avoid loss of congressional chairmanships through a Republican victory. But a large minority of editors argues that the South's present influence in Congress is its best hope of defending the principles it espouses. In continuing, nationwide discussion, some editors feel that only a 1952 Democratic platform acceptable to the South will prevent a party split. But majority opinion is that the South's course in 1952 will depend on various factors.

EL PASO Times (Dem.):

"Today, Southern Democrats hold many, if not most, of the Chairmanships in the Senate and House. . . . As Speaker Sam Rayburn told the Southern Governors' Conference . . . a Southern revolt would only elect a Republican President . . . and every Southern man who holds a responsible place in Congress will lose his position. . . . If Southern Democrats want to retain the leadership in Congress and continue to hold the balance of power they would do well to stick by the Democratic Party, but use their influence to clean up objectionable features of that party's present policies."

CHARLOTTE (N.C.) Observer

(Ind.-Dem.): "If Southern Democrats would heed Rayburn's appeal, it would mean they would vote to continue and extend the status quo . . . in order that Democratic Party leaders . . . can continue in the posts of speaker and chairmen of Senate and House committees. This in itself is good for the Nation and advantageous to the South, but it's not enough. Intelligence should be the guide and not blind obedience to a party that no longer stands for the principles that originally inspired the kind of loyalty that Rayburn urges."

NASHVILLE Tennessean

(Dem.): "Rayburn's plea for support for the party that has been the

Mrs. Edna Mouser was brought to her home here last week. She recently underwent surgery at University hospital.

Floyd Mouser is able to be out after having been ill in his home here part of last week.

The big turkey supper held here by the WSCS last Wednesday evening is over and was pronounced a success both from a financial and social standpoint. In fact it was a real homecoming and many were present from quite a distance.

The former Jesse Walker property has again changed hands. The people who bought of the Walkers have moved to Miller station and the people moving here formerly lived in the George Fitzgerald property.

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Bauman from here and Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Hill of Williamsport also Mr. and Mrs. George Jennings of Columbus were Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Graham of Orient. The dinner was to celebrate the seventieth birthday of Mr. Graham.

Mrs. Jesse Wilson spent Sunday with the W. T. Grahams here. On Saturday she attended the wedding of a girl friend at Commercial Point and was her matron of honor.

traditional friend of the South makes sense. . . . The stop-Truman forces speak of high taxes, states rights and corruption in government. Rayburn refers to the miraculous increase in national income . . . the passage of needed social legislation, and the general existence of good government despite the disclosure of certain official derelictions. . . . By warning the South against the danger of forfeiting its strong position in Congress, Rayburn has done it a service."

DALLAS News (Ind.-Dem.):

"The Speaker did not refer to what the South has already lost in spite of the places of power held by representatives of the South. . . . The South will concede the places. But the power must have been cut off somewhere along the line. . . . Surely Rayburn would not argue that Texas would be better off with the best of its Senators and Representatives and minus its tide-lands. It is doubtful if he could have been moved by wild horses to believe that the South should take Truman and FEPC in order to retain committee posts. . . . But that is what he really did urge."

ST. LOUIS Globe-Democrat

(Ind.): "Truman's friends in the South may conclude that civil rights is more campaign talk than honest intention to force the issue. . . . But the President's two sturdiest critics in the South—Byrd of Virginia and Byrnes of South Carolina—are not concerned alone over civil rights. They are convinced that Truman is wrecking the party by his advocacy of socialistic panaceas, by his reckless waste of the taxpayers' money, by administration scandals, by his emphasis on centralization of power in Washington. . . . What they propose to do to achieve party purification . . . will be revealed later."

WICHITA Eagle (Ind.):

"There are powerful voices speaking for a rebellion if the Truman Democrats don't make a real effort at Chicago in July, 1952 to appease the South. . . . The plan is, if the Democratic party doesn't perform to suit the South, to put the name of Senator Russell of Georgia, Senator Byrd of Virginia or another at the head of the ticket in the Southern states. If the South had done so in 1948 (there were only 39 dissenting Southern Democratic electoral votes then) Truman could not have been elected."

ATLANTA Constitution (Dem.): "While dislike of Harry S. Truman is as intense as ever . . . the cold facts are that the revolt has lost purpose and direction as well as steam. . . . A lot of things could happen. If Truman doesn't run there will be no rebellion. If General Eisenhower is nominated, there won't be a revolt. If Senator Taft is the GOP nominee and Truman the Democratic, there will be some third man nominated by some of the Southern states. If the Supreme Court knocks out general segregation, as it is not expected to do, there will be a political revolt. . . . So—we wait and see."

Buckeyes Leave For Important Wolverine Test

COLUMBUS, Nov. 23 — Coach Woody Hayes, seven assistant coaches and a squad of 40 determined Ohio State gridders left from Columbus early today for the last game of the season at Michigan.

The Bucks, who spent Thanksgiving Day running through final practice sessions, are scheduled to stay overnight in Toledo before completing the trip to Ann Arbor tomorrow morning. They had some last-minute practice in Toledo's Glass Bowl shortly after arriving at noon today.

The Buckeyes are gunning for their first victory over the Michigan team since 1944 and the odds-makers are giving the Ohioans a slight edge for this encounter.

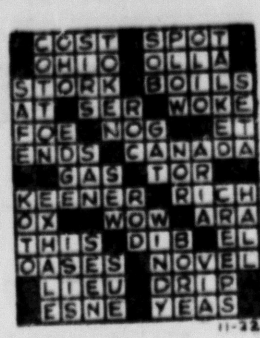

Indications were that Ohio's T-coached eleven would plague the single-wing Wolverines with passes and enough ground-running to make the game interesting.

Hayes' offensive hopes are pinned on Quarterback Tony Cuccillo and Halfback Vic Janowicz. Janowicz and 14 other Bucks will be playing their last game for Ohio State.

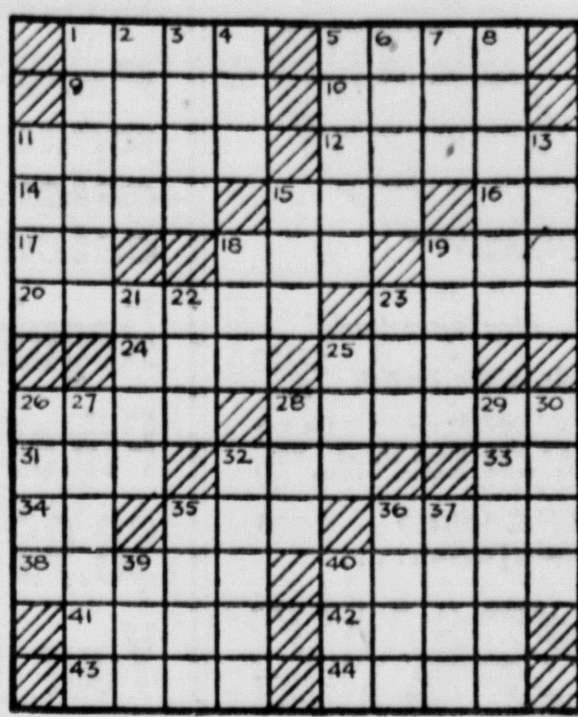

Michigan athletic officials indicate a crowd of some 97,000 fans will be on hand to see tomorrow's game. Hundreds of thousands more will see the game on television.

Sokolsky's These Days

As a matter of fact, life is so cheap in the Orient that it must be unbelievable to them that we feed our captives better than they feed their own soldiers.

This is the background that undoubtedly was known to our military authorities when they went into the Korean war. They must have known that Chinese fight to kill, that they are not merciful, that they particularly enjoy murdering their "exploiters," that is, the so-called Europeans, which includes Americans. They had the experience of the Nanking massacre in 1927 when the Communists murdered whomever they could, particularly foreigners. Before that, there was ample evidence going back to the days of the Boxer Rebellion.

But even if we are to assume that nobody in the Pentagon has any background, an incorrect assumption, it is true and under the processes I recommend demonstrable that our government was informed by its own military intelligence out of Tokyo that the Chinese Communists were massacring American prisoners of war.

The data were ignored. The Pentagon was then regarding everything that MacArthur and his staff reported with suspicion because they knew that he wanted to fight not a halting but a winning war. They preferred Acheson's dialectics to MacArthur's facts.

And now we have it—100,000 and more casualties; perhaps 20,000 dead.

Warrior Quint Beats Scioto

Salter Creek Warrior cagers invaded at Scioto Wednesday night to earn their first victory of the season with a 42-34 win over the Bufalos.

Salter Creek's reserve team made the evening complete for the invaders, taking the preliminary test by a 26-25 margin. Box score of the evening's play was not made available.

Baker Favored Over Henry

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—Unbeaten Pittsburgh heavyweight Bob Baker rules a 2-1 favorite to defeat Clarence Henry of Los Angeles in tonight's ten-round main event at Madison Square Garden.

Baker, who at 213 pounds will have a weight pull of more than 25 pounds over his foe, is ranked as the nation's fourth best heavyweight.

To the victor may go a shot at second-ranked Ezzard Charles, the ex-champion.

Bowl shortly after arriving at noon today.

The Buckeyes are gunning for their first victory over the Michigan team since 1944 and the odds-makers are giving the Ohioans a slight edge for this encounter.

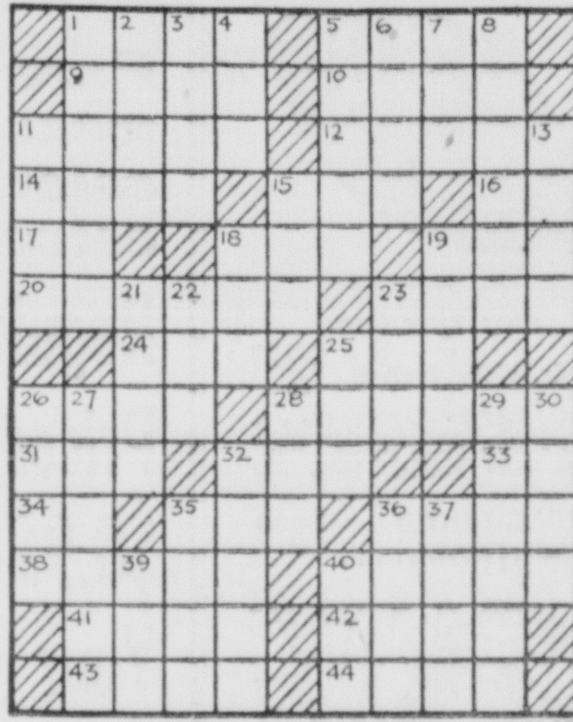

Indications were that Ohio's T-coached eleven would plague the single-wing Wolverines with passes and enough ground-running to make the game interesting.

Hayes' offensive hopes are pinned on Quarterback Tony Gurcillo and Halfback Vic Janowicz. Janowicz and 14 other Bucks will be playing their last game for Ohio State.

Michigan athletic officials indicate a crowd of some 97,000 fans will be on hand to see tomorrow's game. Hundreds of thousands more will see the game on television.

New Building Limitations Explained

Critical Materials Said Key

Gilliland Details Construction Future

There can be a lot of construction work done in Pickaway County during the next year, but it will consist mostly of smaller buildings.

T. O. Gilliland, local lumber and building materials dealer and member of the public affairs committee of the National Retail Lumber Dealers Association, said this week:

"Larger homes and commercial and industrial buildings cannot be put up without securing permission in Washington unless they are designed to require a minimum of steel and copper."

A few such permits are being approved, Gilliland said. He added:

"No permit is needed to build a single-family home if it uses no structural steel and no more than 1,800 pounds of other steel and 35 pounds of copper or 1,450 pounds of other steel, 160 pounds of copper, not counting fabricated building products, such as heating and plumbing fixtures whose weights need not be considered."

IN THE CASE of stores, garages, warehouses and other commercial and institutional buildings, construction can go ahead without a permit if no more than 4,000 pounds of steel and 200 pounds of copper are to be used in any calendar quarter. The same provision applies in the case of farm buildings.

In other words, Gilliland declared, the size of a new building—except one intended for amusement or recreational purposes—is limited only by the quantity of critical materials it requires.

Any type of repair and modernization work also can go ahead without special authorization from Washington, provided the necessary materials are available.

Tree Windbreaks Urged In East

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23 — Tree-lined windbreaks for farmsteads are usually associated with western states and weather conditions, but at least one expert says they can also serve many purposes on eastern farms.

Engineer W. C. Kreuger of Rutgers university says the windbreaks can be used as snow fences to keep roads and lanes from being closed. And, by blocking some of the wind, they can minimize the drying out of garden plots or protect building areas from field-blown sand.

Evergreens provide year-round protection, but Kreuger says even deciduous trees can provide shade and shelter during the summer, and some protection during the winter months.
